Expert in storytelling, advocacy, and mobilizing churches

Vickie is the co-founder (with her husband) of the Australian arts and faith organization SPARC, the executive producer of The JUSTICE Conference, and a passionate advocate for the work of World Vision.

A television presenter by trade, Vickie is driven to connect people and ideas through creative endeavors. After hearing about the crisis in Syria, Vickie partnered with World Vision and other organizations to form “We Welcome Refugees,” a platform to mobilize the Western church to respond to the global refugee crisis. Motivated by her desire to see the image of God in each and every person, Vickie has traveled throughout the Middle East, learning from refugees and sharing their stories. In Lebanon in 2016, she witnessed World Vision’s work providing basic necessities and empowering families forced to flee Syria and suffering the loss of their homes, jobs, communities, and even family members.

Vickie is currently studying at North Park Theological Seminary. She lives in Chicago, Illinois with her husband, Mark, and daughters, Jada and Mischa.
