

Jose Luis Figueroa

Expert in development, leadership, and finance in the humanitarian sector

Following God's calling, Jose Luis brought his extensive experience in development, leadership, and finance to serve at World Vision in 1995. As Senior Director for Economic Development, he oversees programs in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. He also co-chairs the Corinthians Council, a biblical diversity and inclusion initiative within World Vision U.S.

Jose Luis has used his strong belief and passion to help bring about transformation in the lives of children, families, communities, and donors. He has served in many roles at World Vision, including on the grants team, on the sponsorship team, as a country program manager, and as CEO for World Vision's microfinance affiliate in Honduras.

After earning his Bachelor of Arts in international relations from Oglethorpe University in Atlanta, Jose Luis earned his postgraduate degree in employment creation from the International Labor Organization and University of Turin, Italy.

Jose Luis and his wife, Lily, who also works for World Vision, have three children and live in Federal Way, Washington.

worldvision.org/speakers | speakers@worldvision.org

World Vision is a Christian humanitarian organization dedicated to working with children, families, and their communities worldwide to reach their full potential by tackling the causes of poverty and injustice. Visit worldvision.org for more information.